INVESTMENT PHILOSOPHY

We believe our rigorous fundamentally driven investment process will produce superior performance over time.

We focus on high quality owner/operators of real estate because our research shows they have offered durable cash flows and attractive risk-adjusted returns.

The value of listed real estate securities is a compilation of not only the underlying asset values but also the value of management's ability to capitalize on opportunities.

We believe successful real estate investing requires active management and patience to take advantage of multi-year value creation opportunities.

Capping AUM at 1% of the investment universe preserves our trading flexibility, liquidity, and potential for repeatable results.

TOP TEN PORTFOLIO SECTOR WEIGHTS VS. BENCHMARK(%)²

MARKET REVIEW

During the initial quarter of 2024, the financial markets grappled with a confluence of factors, with the trajectory of interest rates serving as a focal point. This period marked a departure from the preceding quarter, where we saw interest rates move lower after hitting an intra-year peak. While 2023 witnessed a steady ascent in rates overall, the onset of 2024 introduced a mixed pattern, triggering both optimism and apprehension among investors.

The timing and magnitude of potential rate cuts came into focus, with economic updates increasingly supporting a later, softer rate cut trajectory as compared to market expectations at the start of the year. The potential stickiness of inflation underscores the challenges faced by policymakers in calibrating monetary policy and with respect to investors' expectations, which will likely weigh on the direction and level of volatility around interest rates over the remainder of this year.

Against this backdrop, the performance of capital-intensive sectors and bond prices was pressured lower. However, despite these challenges, the technology sector continued its trend, spearheading the rally in broader market indices. Publicly listed real estate performance reversed course to start the year, underperforming broader financial markets, following sector leadership in the fourth quarter of 2023.

Within real estate, specialty and regional mall REITs emerged as top performers, leveraging evolving consumer trends and the growing demand for niche property types. In contrast, the diversified and gaming REITs sectors underperformed on various constituents facing interest rate volatility and the potential that acquisitions or dispositions activity may be constrained by that volatility.

PORTFOLIO REVIEW

The Duff & Phelps U.S. Real Estate Securities strategy underperformed the benchmark during the quarter, with security selection and allocation weighing on performance. Given macroeconomic and fundamental crosscurrents, we had expected management teams to conservatively set earnings expectations for the year. However, a few key companies set expectations more conservatively in comparison to the peer set.

An underweight to the diversified sector, an overweight to data centers, and selection within the self storage sector all contributed positively to performance. Conversely, security selection within the industrial sector was the largest detractor, followed by an overweight allocation to telecommunication REITs and selection within the apartment sector.

At the security selection level, our largest positive attribution contributors came from not owning Healthcare Realty Trust (HR), an overweight to Brixmor Property Group (BRX), and overweight positions in Sabra Healthcare (SBRA) and CubeSmart (CUBE).

The overweight to Ventas (VTR) was the portfolio's primary detractor, followed by overweight positions in Rexford Industrial Realty (REXR), Apartment Income REIT (AIRC), and Americold Realty (COLD).

INVESTMENT OUTLOOK

The Duff & Phelps Real Estate Securities Team expects global economic growth to slow in response to higher interest rates and quantitative tightening. Unlike last year, in 2024 we expect the Fed to lower rates to curtail economic landing risk surrounding the November presidential election, which in our view may benefit listed real estate.

Naturally, just as we expect the economy to slow, we expect listed real estate cash flow to remain positive yet decelerate across many property sectors, as companies absorb higher financial and operating costs. Quality and resiliency in the form of well-positioned balance sheets and sustainable growth in cash flow and dividends will likely be preferred by investors as we continue to face an uncertain economic environment.

Fundamentally, secular growth drivers should continue to benefit data centers and logistics. Within the U.S. healthcare property sector, senior housing operating properties and skilled nursing facilities will continue to see an improvement in occupancy, and pricing power should increase further in senior housing. Self storage has been impacted by the moderation in housing turnover caused by higher interest rates and, in certain markets, a higher level of new supply, which is negatively impacting pricing for new customers. The residential apartments subsector in the U.S. is also in the process of digesting a significant amount of new supply over the next 12 to 18 months. The office property sector will likely remain one of the more challenging and controversial sectors.

Given the capital that has been raised by private equity sponsors on a global basis, the new year may see a pick-up in public-to-private M&A activity, particularly if debt availability and pricing improve and global listed real estate continues to trade at discounted valuations.

In our view, listed real estate has shown an ability to outperform following the end of a rising interest rate cycle and could be a beneficiary of lower rates. With an abundance of private capital on the sidelines and discounted pricing available via listed real estate, we see listed real estate as more attractive than private real estate.

As always, thank you for your continued support of our team and investment strategy.

Net composite returns are calculated by subtracting the highest separate account investment management fee (including performance fees, if applicable) in effect for the period. Index returns do not reflect the deduction of any fees.
